It is now Major Hayes and he is the present Commanding Officer of the Squadron.

3. The original cadre of enlisted personnel was assigned the Group from the 328th Fighter Group at Hamilton Field, California. Subsequent additions were from the 4th Air Force Replacement Depot at Hammer Field, Calif. The first pilots, flight leaders and squadron Operations Officers were assigned from the 328th Group, also, and later additions from Luke Field, Arizona.

4. Following is a resume of the movements of the organization from time of activation to arrival in the European Theater of Operations:

A. At Hamilton Field for two months following activation. On March 6, 1943, the Group arrived for the first phase of training at Tonopah, Nevada. There the organization was completed during the three months of training in the desert. The first trainee pilots joined the unit from Luke Field and were assigned to squadrons.

B. Per SO #104, Major Bombing and Gunnery Range, Tonopah, Nevada, dated 24 May 1943, the unit was moved back to California, beginning the movement on 1 June 1943. The 362nd Squadron moved to Hayward, Calif., while the 363rd and 364th, along with Group Headquarters, were assigned to Santa Rosa, Calif. The Group was still attached to Hamilton Field and the assignments were sub-bases of Hamilton Field. Additional pilots joined the Group here and T/O authorization in personnel was filled. Misfits and unsatisfactory trainees were being eliminated here.

(1) Again in California the Group trained under the San Francisco Fighter Wing, Commanded by General SCHRAUM. Full tactical training was received in ground control interception, dive-bombing, ground-strafting, and low level air ground support. Ground support training was completed with armored units stationed nearby. Group missions were flown with all three squadrons receiving practice in escort and attacks on bombers. Training of ground personnel was carried on here as at Tonopah.

(2) Lt. Colonel Edwin S. CHICKERING, O-21405, took command of the 357th Fighter Group on 7 July 1943, at Santa Rosa, relieving Lt. Colonel Loring F. STEPHENSON, Jr., who is now commanding the 33rd Fighter Group in Italy. Captain Alfred W. CRAVEN, Jr., O-902496, joined the unit on August 16th and was appointed Group Intelligence Officer and Group Claims Officer. Now a Major since 16 November 1943.

(3) The 357th moved again on August 18th. This time to Groville Sub-base, farther north and inland in California. Headquarters was accompanied by the 363rd Squadron. The 362nd Squadron remained at Hayward and the 364th Squadron moved to Marysville, Calif. Further training was carried on and excess personnel was being eliminated.

(4) Warning orders for overseas movement were received on August 20th. Inspections began immediately along with the final clearing of unsatisfactory and excessive personnel. Pilot strength was reduced to T/O strength authorization and all other departments were cleared. The inspections were satisfactory.

A-3 of Headquarters, Army Air Forces made the tactical inspections and representatives from the Inspector General's Department made administrative inspections giving a rating of very satisfactory. Here final preparations were made for shipment overseas and physical and military training for all personnel was stressed.

(6) On November 9th the unit entrained from their respective stations bound for the staging area of Camp Shanks, of the New York Port of Embarkation. While at Camp Shanks all of the final details for overseas movement were taken care of, i.e., arms were inspected, final equipment issued, records brought in order to the last minute, lectures and movies on military facts attended, and physical culture engaged in.

(7) The unit boarded the train bound for the pier at approximately 2230 hour, crossed the harbor on the ferry, and at 0300 hour, 23 November 1943, went aboard H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth. Sailed the next afternoon at 1600 hour, 23rd of November.

Arrived in the Fifth of Clyde and went ashore 30 November 1943, entrained that afternoon with 362nd Squadron bound for our station, USAAF #157, Raydon Wood, Suffolk. The advance echelon, Lt. Colonel GRAHAM, Group Executive Officer, Major CRAWEN, Group Intelligence Officer, and Captain DREGHE, Group Operations Officer, met the train and went along with us to the quarters that had been assigned. 363rd Squadron and 364th Squadron remained on the ship and followed on December 2nd and 3rd, respectively.

INITIAL INSTALLMENT
UNIT HISTORY
357TH FIGHTER GROUP

1. Original designation of unit was the 357th Fighter Group. There has been no change in this designation. During the training period on the West Coast of the U. S., the Group trained with P-39 aircraft.

2. Activated at Hamilton Field, Calif., per WD Letter, AG 320.2, dated 6 December 1942, as amended by WD Letter, Subject: "Constitution and Activation of Certain Army Air Forces Units", dated 1 December 1942, the date of constitution of this organization was fixed as 1 December 1942. (Supporting document No. 1 attached). The original personnel were assigned 22 December 1942 (Document No. 2 attached).

a. The three squadrons, 362nd, 363rd, and 364th of the 357th Fighter Group, were activated by the same order listed in paragraph 2 above.

3. The original cadre of enlisted personnel was assigned from 4th AF Replacement depot as was subsequent additions of personnel. The first pilots, flight leaders and operations officers were assigned from the 328th Fighter Group. (Documents 3 and 4 attached).

4. Following is a resume of the movements of the organization from time of activation to arrival in the ETO:

A. Hamilton Field for two months following activation. On March 6, 1943, the Group arrived for the first phase of training at Tonopah, Nevada. (Document No. 5). There the organization was completed during the first three months of training in the desert. The first trainee pilots joined the unit from Luke Field and were assigned to Squadrons, through the 328th Fighter Group at Hamilton Field. (Document No. 6).

B. At Hamilton Field, which remained the home station for the remainder of the period in the 4th Air Force, close supervision was maintained and per SO #104, Hdqrs Bombing and Gunnery Range, Tonopah, Nevada, dated 24 May 1943, the unit was moved back to California, beginning the movement on 1 June 1943. The 362nd Squadron moved to Hayward, Calif., while the 363rd and 364th, along with Group Headquarters, were assigned to Santa Rosa AAB, Calif. These were sub-bases of Hamilton Field. (Document No. 7).

(1) Again in California, the Group trained under the San Francisco Fighter Wing, commanded by General Schramm. New pilots were assigned. (Document No. 8). Full tactical training was received in ground controlled interception, dive-bombing, ground strafing, and low level air-ground support, bomber escort and attack. Ground cooperation training was carried out with armored units stationed nearby. Group missions were flown with all three squadrons receiving practice in escort and attack on bombers. Training of ground personnel was continued. Misfits and unsatisfactory trainees were eliminated here and the Group began to function as an efficient unit.

(3) Captain Irwin H. DREGNE, O-431399, had become Group Operations Officer, and Captain Alfred W. CRAVEN JR., O-902496, (now Major Craven), was assigned to Group Intelligence. (Documents 10 and 11).

(4) The Group moved again on 18 Aug 1943, this time to the Oroville, Calif., AAB. Headquarters detachment was accompanied by the 363rd Squadron; the 362nd Squadron remained at Hayward, Calif., AAB, while the 364th Squadron moved to Marysville, Calif., AAB. (Document No. 12).

(5) Warning Orders for overseas movement were received by the unit on 30 August 1943. Inspections began immediately, along with the final clearing of unsatisfactory personnel. Pilot strength was reduced to T/O authorization and other departments were cleared. The inspections were satisfactory. (Document No. 13).

(6) The component units of the Group moved again, the movement starting 3 October 1943. Headquarters and 363rd Squadron moved to Casper, Wyoming, AAB, 362nd Squadron moved to Pocatello, Idaho, AAB, and 364th Squadron moved to Ainsworth, Nebraska, AAB, all in the Second Air Force for last minute combined training with heavy bombardment units of that command. (See Document No. 14). Final preparations for shipment overseas and military and physical conditioning was stressed.

(7) On November 9th the unit entrained from their respective stations bound for the staging area of Camp Shanks, of the New York Port of Embarkation (Document No. 15, 16, 17, 18). While at Camp Shanks all of the final details were taken care of; i.e., arms were inspected, final equipment issued, records brought in order to the last minute, lectures and movies on military facts attended, and physical culture engaged in.

(8) The unit boarded the train bound for the pier at approximately 2330 hour, crossed the ferry, and at 0300, 22 Nov 1943, went aboard HMS Queen Elizabeth. The unit sailed the next afternoon at 1600, 23 Nov 1943. (Secret Orders).

(9) Group Headquarters arrived in the Firth of Clyde (see attached roster, Document No. 19), along with other units of the Group, and went ashore 30 November 1943, entrained that afternoon with 362nd Squadron bound for USAAF Station #157, Raydon Wood, Suffolk. The advance echelon, Lt. Colonel GRAHAM, Group Executive Officer; Major CRAVEN, Group Intelligence Officer, and Captain DREGNE, Group Operations Officer, met the train and went along with the troops to the quarters that had been assigned. 363rd and 364th Squadrons remained on the ship and followed on Dec 2 and 3, 1943, respectively.

5. The following pilots were killed in training during the period 1 Jan 1943 to 31 Dec 1943 in the U.S.:

Group Executive Officer; Major Robert T. ROMINE, O-298745, Group Adjutant; Major Alfred W. CRAVEN JR., O-902496, Group Intelligence Officer; Capt. Irwin H. DREGNE, O-431399, Operations Officer; and CWO Hoy L. PURDUE, W-2112394, Group Supply Officer.

7. In the ETO the Group was assigned to the IX Air Force by letter, Hq USAAFUK, dated 7 December 1943 and to the IX Fighter Command by General Orders No. 146, Hq IX Air Force, dated 16 December 1943, to be effective 7 December 1943 (Documents No. 20 and 21).

8. Difficulties in OTU work was experienced at first, mainly due to lack of equipment. OEL and TAT equipment was slow in arriving, but during December it finally arrived. P-51 airplanes were assigned in twos and threes and line crews began making themselves familiar with their new work, as did the pilots with their new planes. Great was the enthusiasm over the Mustang, about which the pilots had dreamed of being able to go into combat with when once they arrived in the ETO.

9. Training directives, Field Orders, and Memorandums from the IX Air Force, IX Fighter Command, and 70th Fighter Wing were received and complied with. An extensive program of orientation, training, and field work was begun. Operations section issued daily training memorandums for the Group and Squadrons, (Document No. 22 attached). Personnel in almost every section were on DS at schools and operational groups, learning procedures of the USAAF in the ETO. An extract of a typical order is attached. (Document No. 23).

10. Recreation facilities were provided by the American Red Cross in the way of the AERO Club for Officers and Enlisted Men, a place where one could eat, listen, and later on the Enlisted Men could dance on Wednesday nights. An Officer's Club was also opened in conjunction with the Officer's Mess. A copy of the notice to the New Year's Eve dance is attached. (Document No. 24.)

11. No operational missions were flown by the 357th while in the IX Air Force. Individual pilots flew missions with the 354th Fighter Group.

 I. On 24 Feb 1944, I was leading the Group on bomber escort (FO 250). Rendezvous was made without difficulty. The B-24's, our bombers, were flying directly below the B-17's, and not out to the side, as stated in the Field Order. Goldsmith 1-2 reported no difficulty, so we stayed on top and covered the entire mass. Eventually the two ATF's extricated themselves, going in the usual wrong directions (also not covered in the FO) so we peeled off and took the B-24's, hoping they would sooner or later find out where they were, as it was CAVU. This, fortunately, proved to be true for they turned to the left at the I/P and positioned themselves for squadron bombing on the bomb run. At this time the bulk of my squadron had aborted (engine trouble and out of oxygen) leaving myself and wingman (Bless his heart) to cover some 40 or 50 bombers. Two 109's were scared off and one 190 hit the deck as we drove up on him. The bomb run was completed with excellent results, a right turn was made and the next five miles continued without incident. At this time a JU 88 was sighted about 2000' below (23,000) and two miles to the left. As Goldie said he was OK, I pulled off and gave chase. He went down fast, losing altitude in a steep spiral. At 3000' I turned tight inside of him and he obligingly straightened out, allowing me to do the same, so I closed in straight down the alley and opened fire at about 600 yards in an attempt to discourage the rear gunner. Steady fire was held until he burst into flames. I overran him rapidly (cause seeming to be excessive airspeed as I was indicating 550 MPH at the time) so I yanked it out to the side to watch the fun. The whole airplane was coming unbuttoned. My wingman, good old Beal, had slowed down a bit and later stated he saw two men jump and their chutes open (poor shooting on my part). The ship continued straight ahead, diving at an angle of about 40° until contact with Mother Earth was made, which caused the usual splendid spectacle of smoke and flame. Looking up suddenly, Lo and Behold, is there wasn't a ME 110 dashing across the horizon. He showed a little sense and tried to turn, so I was forced to resort to deflection shooting - opening up and spraying him up and down, round and across (I believe I was a little excited at this point). Fortunately the left engine blew up and burst into flames. As I overran him (still indicating 500 MPH) the pilot dumped the canopy and started to get out. He was dressed in brown and had streaming yellow hair, the handsome devil. I lost sight at this point (1000') and again pulled out to the side. No chute was seen, but the aircraft descended impolitely into the center of the town of ERFURT, causing rather understandable confusion as it blew up and burned merrily. Again as I looked up (this is getting monotonous) a FW 190 whistled up and just as I began to turn with him my engine quit, embarrassing me no end. Believing I had been hit by the 110 gunner, and being at a loss as to the next step, I opened fire (90° deflection) at zero lead and pulled it around clear through him until he passed out of sight below the nose (more bad shooting), intending to frighten him off more than anything else. No claim is made, as I saw no more. Here the engine caught again, laboring and pounding badly. At this point I passed to the side of an air-drome, completely snowed in, but saw hangars and maybe 20 twin-engine aircraft which may have been dummies, as they also appeared to be snow covered. Struggling to keep afloat, I increased the RPM's to 2500 and reduced the manifold pressure to 20 inches, (airspeed 170) and slowly but surely gained altitude to 12,000', not going higher as Beal was out of oxygen. We crossed out without further incident, comparatively speaking, going south of the Ruhr, and avoiding all towns of any size. At the coast, a P-47 pulled up behind me at 1000' above. I waved my wings trying to get him to join us, but he edged out to the right, apparently taking a good look, then turned back inland.

My ship had not been hit and at the time of writing the engine difficulty is not known.

I give a world of credit to my wingman, 1st Lt. Henry E. Beal, Jr, for his support and companionship.

Further deponent sayeth not.

Henry E. Beal, Jr.

24 February 1944,
P.O. #250.

I was flying wingman to Colonel Spicer and we were supporting various boxes of B-24's, on their run to bomb Gotha. We had dropped our external tanks and were weaving above the bombers when the Colonel peeled off in a very steep spiral after a JU-88. We followed that aircraft down to approximately 5,000 feet, at which time I was indicating 550 M.P.H. Here, being unable to outspeed or out-turn us, the JU-88 straightened out and was immediately shot by Colonel Spicer and burst into flames. Wishing to get in a little target practice at something besides a towed sleeve, I fired a short burst and then observed two parachutes, dirty gray in color, blossom from the plane. Seconds later the JU-88 crashed and burned in a field.

A few minutes later, while we were still around 5,000 feet, an ME-110 came flying blithely by. We gave short chase and again the Colonel proved his marksmanship by getting strikes and flames in a deflection shot. The plane crashed into the center of a much horrified, unidentified (by me at least) German city.

UNIT HISTORY - STATION DISPENSARY - 357TH FIGHTER GROUP - 1 JULY 1945 -31 DECEMBER 1945, with a Summary of Events prior to 1 July 1945

1. The Group still carries the original designation of 357 that was given when it was activated at Hamilton Field, California on 1 December 1942. Activation was by the authority and according to instructions contained in WD Letter, AG 320.2, dated 6 December 1942, and Fourth Air Force General Orders #147, dated 16 December 1942.

The small beginning was actually when nine Officers were assigned to the unit by IV Fighter Command Special Orders #354, dated 22 December 1942, and enlisted men from the 328th Fighter Group, a unit of the IV Fighter Command that was stationed at Hamilton Field, California, reported from their unit for duty with the infant organization. Additional enlisted men came from the 4th Air Force Replacement Depot at Hammer Field, Fresno, California. The other Officers to come into the organization were mostly from the IV Fighter Command. The first few pilots were taken from the 328th Group with most of the others being assigned from Luke Field, Arizona.

2. Following is a resume of the movements of the organization from the time of activation to present:

A. Hamilton Field for two months following activation. On March 6, 1943, the Group arrived for the first phase of training at Tonopah Bombing and Gunnery Range, Tonopah, Nevada. The first trainee pilots joined the Group at Tonopah, as well as the remainder of the enlisted personnel necessary to bring the unit to 100% strength.

B. At Hamilton Field, which remained the home station for the Group while in the 4th Air Force, close supervision was maintained and after three months in the desert orders finally came to move. 362nd Fighter Squadron began the movement by going to Hayward, California. Group Headquarters, 363rd and 364th Fighter Squadrons were gone from Tonopah by 6 June 1943. They were assigned to Santa Rosa, California, AAB.

Again in California, the Group trained under the San Francisco Fighter Wing, commanded by General Schraam. New pilots were assigned. Full tactical training was received in ground-controlled interception, divebombing, ground-strafting, and low-level air-ground support, bomber escort and attack. Training was carried out with cooperation from armored units stationed nearby and from bomber units also training. Training of ground personnel continued, as well as ground training for pilots. Misfits and unsatisfactory trainees were eliminated here and the Group began to function as an efficient Unit.

C. Another move came on 18 August 1943. This time to the Oroville, California, AAB. Headquarters detachment was accompanied by the 363rd Squadron: the 362nd Squadron remained at Hayward, and the 364th Squadron moved to Marysville, California.

At the new stations training continued along the same trend as before, only in a more advanced phase. Warning Orders for overseas movement were received by the unit on 30 August 1943. Inspections began immediately, along with the final clearing of unsatisfactory personnel. Pilot strength was reduced to T/O authorization as well as ground personnel.

D. The next movement of the Group started on 3 October 1943. The move was into the 2nd Air Force for the last minute combined training with heavy bombardment units of that command. Group and 363rd Squadron moved to Casper, Wyoming, 364th Squadron moved to Ainsworth, Nebraska, and 362nd Squadron moved to Pocatello, Idaho. Final preparations for moving overseas were made while at the above stations.

E. On November 9th the units of 357th Group entrained from their respective stations bound for the staging area of Camp Shanks all of the final details were taken care of; i. e., Arms were inspected, final equipment issued, records brought in order to the last minute, lectures and movies on military facts attended and physical training classes attended.

F. From Camp Shanks the unit boarded the train bound for the pier at approximately 2330 hours, crossed the ferry, and at 0300, 23 November 1943 went aboard HMS Queen Elizabeth. Sailing hour was at 1600 hours, 23 November 1943. At sea for five and one half days, docking at Querrock, Scotland, in the Firth of Clyde, 29 November 1943. Immediately after docking 362nd Squadron and Group Headquarters entrained for Raydon Wood, Suffolk, England, arriving after an 18 hours train trip at approximately 1130 hours 30 November 1943. The other two Squadrons followed on successive days. The first assignment of the Group in the European Theater of Operations was to the IX Air Force. While in the IX Air Force the unit was assigned to the 70th Fighter Wing. Difficulties were experienced at first, mainly due to lack of equipment. OEL and TAT equipment was late in arriving, but during December it finally arrived. Training directives, Field Orders, and memorandums from all of the higher Headquarters were received and complied with. An extensive program of orientation, training, and field work was begun. Pilots began flying operational missions as part of the 354th Group. For 357th Group the war had finally begun.

G. Verbal Orders from General Quesada of the IX Fighter Command moved the unit again. This move was to AAF Station B-373, Leiston, Suffolk, from the IX Air Force to become a part of the VIII Air Force, VIII Fighter Command, and 66th Fighter Wing. The move was approximately 40 miles distant and made in convoy with Headquarters and 362nd Squadron beginning the move and the other two Squadrons following on successive days.

Unit History - Station Dispensary - 357th Fighter Group

Since 31 January 1944, the Group has remained at the same place, AAF Station F-373, Leiston, Suffolk.

3. The first airplanes assigned to the newly activated unit was at Tonopah, Nevada; the P-39 Aircobra. This plane was used all during the training in America. Upon arrival in the ETO P-51 Mustangs were assigned and it is with them that the Group has been flying the successful operational missions. 357th Fighter Group was the first P-51 Group in the VIII Fighter Command. In the five months of operation the Group has destroyed nearly 60 German aircraft per month and has accomplished outstanding work in bomber escort, ground attack, and other aerial support.

4. Through all these complicated operations the Squadron and Group Surgeons kept the health of the Group at a high level. Moral in the unit during its early days in the States and during its combat operations from England was high. The Squadron spirit was evident, there was competition in combat as well as on the ground between missions.

5. With the end of Hostilities the Group settled down to a peaceful existence in England, till it was learned that it would go to Germany as a unit of the Occupational Air Force. There were many reactions to this news, some felt it would prove an interesting experience, other would prefer to go to the still active Pacific Theater and still others wished to return to the United States. During the months of June and July 1945 the Group moved all of its personnel and equipment to Neubiberg, Germany a small town just south of Munich.

6. The flow of supplies during the summer and early fall of 1945 was good and as the Group had brought all of its medical and technical equipment from England there was no shortage. However as the redeployment program drained more and more men from the Theater the supply situation became very poor and the back-log of supplies averted much of the confusion that prevailed on many the Air Forces' Stations in this Theater.

7. Major Barker who was the Group Surgeon in England came with his three Surgeons Captain Snedden, Trapp and Wertz. The four continued through out the summer in their usual positions. As the number of points required for return to the United States lowered the Group lost, one by one, all four of its Surgeons and the Squadron dispensaries were closed making way for the present Station Dispensary. Captain Walter E. Deacon arrived in November of 1945 take over the duties of Station Surgeon. Captain Deacon was assisted by Captain Milton Boboy formerly of the 364th Fighter Group. With the arrival of Headquarters 70th Fighter Wing on 8 November 1945, Captain Carl was added to the staff of the Station Dispensary. Now the dispensary handled all the personnel of the Headquarters 70th Fighter Wing, the 328th Signal Company, the 399th Signal Company, the 717th AAF Band, the 357th Fighter Group and its three Squadrons and the 439th Air Service Group. Captain Carl was soon redeployed and Captain Charles Hughes a new arrival took over his duties.

8. The acute shortage of enlisted men became worse. The training of personnel was difficult. The redeployment of key personnel continued despite the lack of replacements. On the job training was the only solution, and many non-technical medical soldiers and administrative clerks became assistants at sick call. At the end of the year, no new men had arrived as yet, and still the redeployment of technicians continued.

A new T/O reduced the medical technician strength of the Fighter Group to all enlisted men from the former number of 26. We did not have enough to fill even this reduced T/O. The Service Group, which formerly had been under 9th Air Force Service Command were transferred as of the end of the year to be attached to the Fighter Group. The enlisted technician strength was also changed but it was increased from 13 to 17. The officer personnel was also changed. There were still four doctors per Fighter Group but the dentist and MAC officer were transferred to the Service Group. The new T/O of the Service Group called for one Major, MC, two Dental Corps Captains, and one MAC officer.

To supplement the medical service it became the policy, therefore, to hire German Civilians in all the units. Civilian doctors, medical corporals, X-Ray technicians, lab workers, ambulance drivers and general duty personnel, are being employed as a stop-gap measure until adequate army replacements arrive from the States. The Station Hospital on Neubiberg Station, for example, employs two dental technicians, a typist, an X-Ray technician, a German doctor to care for the civilians on the base, and a German ambulance driver, whose training including medical school and service in the Wehrmacht. All medical department officers assigned to Wing, 357th Fighter Group, 439th Air Service Group, Wing Signal Companies, 399th and 328th, work in the common Station Hospital. The medical and dental service has been maintained despite all this change by the diligence of the officers involved, who took over many jobs formerly done by enlisted men.

The main medical problem has been Venereal Disease, this Wing and all its subordinate units employ many women in all capacities. It has been most difficult to eliminate contact with these women despite lectures given to both officers and enlisted men. Stress has been placed on the fact that all German women are potentially infected. The necessity for condoms and chemical prophylaxis has been pushed by talks, posters, and personal contacts. Despite this fact the VD rate has slowly risen.

Every effort has been made by the administration to impress the officers and enlisted men with the dangers of venereal disease because regulations have made it an administrative problem. The names of the contacts on this Base are posted in both German and English on the officer's, enlisted men's and Civilians Bulletin Boards. All contacts are taken by the Provost

Marchall to the German Civilian VD Hospital in Munich for diagnosis and treatment. A grant of Penicillin has been already made to Munich for critically-ill patients with diseases which respond to this drug. It is hoped that when the production is sufficient Penicillin will be available for treatment also. There are adequate supplies of Sulpha drugs at present and the treatment has been effective.

I might be noted also from the charts that the health of the command is generally good. A slight rise in injuries and respiratory diseases can be explained by the inclement weather and the rise in winter sports.

Every woman and man employed by the messes has had an X-Ray of the chest. One case of active tuberculosis was picked up in a messworker in the 357th Fighter Group.

Evacuation from Neubiberg Station by ambulance to the 98th General Hospital, is for four miles over a smooth autobahn. The policy has been established of quartering cases in the Dispensaries of the Wings for four days at the most. Lengthier stays are cared for at the General Hospital.

The medical and surgical service at Neubiberg has been excellent despite the lack of sufficient help. To add to the difficulties, four packets have been processed through this field. However, with the anticipation of replacements from the States, the men have faithfully and diligently performed their tasks, redoubled as they have been.

Unit History

1. The Group still carries the original designation of 357 that was given when it was activated at Hamilton Field, California on 1 December 1942. Activation was by the authority and according to instructions contained in WD Letter, AG 320.2, dated 6 December 1942, and Fourth Air Force General Orders #147, dated 16 December 1942.

The small beginning was actually when nine Officers were assigned to the unit by IV Fighter Command Special Orders #354, dated 22 December 1942, and enlisted men from the 328th Fighter Group, a unit of the IV Fighter Command that was stationed at Hamilton Field, California, reported from their unit for duty with the infant organization. Additional enlisted men came from the 4th Air Force Replacement Depot at Hammer Field, Fresno, California. The other Officers to come into the organization were mostly from the IV Fighter Command. The first few pilots were taken from the 328th Group with most of the others being assigned from Luke Field, Arizona.

2. Major LORING F. STETSON, JR., 022346, later a Lt. Colonel, was appointed as the first Commanding Officer of the new unit. The influence of Colonel Stetson is felt by many to be one of the very important factors in the excellent success this unit has enjoyed since becoming an operational unit in this theater. He instilled in the organization as a whole the sense of duty and responsibility of their mission. The pilots who are now the squadron commanders and flight leaders received their first operational training under Colonel Stetson. He commanded the Group from the very first until 7 July 1943 when he was relieved by-----

Lt. Colonel EDWIN S. CHICKERING, 021405, while the Group was stationed at Santa Rosa, California, a satellite of Hamilton Field that was still officially the permanent station of the unit. Colonel Chickering was with the unit during the rest of the days at Santa Rosa, the additional low-level flying days at Oroville, California, (another satellite of Hamilton Field), the flying period of escorting bombers the group passed through in the Second Air Force at Casper, Wyoming, immediately prior to moving overseas and after arrival until relieved 17 February 1944 by-----

Colonel HENRY R. SPICER, 021489, who was the first Commanding Officer to lead the Group into combat. Major James H. Howard, of the 354th Group, and Lt. Colonel Donald J. M. Blakeslee, of the 4th Group, as veterans of flying combat in this theater, led the 357 Group on its first four operational missions. Colonel Spicer then took over the leading of his unit and led every mission thereafter until his plane was damaged by flak near Le Havre and he was forced to bail into the English Channel on 5 March 1944. Efforts at Allied rescue failed but he was saved by the Nazis and is now listed as a prisoner.

Lt. Colonel DONALD W. GRAHAM, 025247, who had served as second in command of the Group (known as Executive Officer while in America and Deputy Group Commander in this theater) since January of 1943, was elevated to Commanding Officer upon the loss of Colonel Spicer. He was later promoted to Colonel and is still serving as Group Commander.

3. Following is a resume of the movements of the organization from the time of activation to present:

A. Hamilton Field for two months following activation. On March 6, 1943, the Group arrived for the first phase of training at Tonopah Bombing and Gunnery Range, Tonopah, Nevada. The first trainee pilots joined the Group at Tonopah, as well as the remainder of the enlisted personnel necessary to bring the unit to 100% strength.

B. At Hamilton Field, which remained the home station for the Group while in the 4th Air Force, close supervision was maintained and after three months in the desert orders finally came to move. 362 Squadron began the movement by going to Hayward, California. Group Headquarters, 363 and 364 Squadrons were gone from Tonopah by 6 June 1943. They were assigned to Santa Rosa, California, AAB.

Again in California, the Group trained under the San Francisco Fighter Wing, commanded by General Schramm. New pilots were assigned. Full tactical training was received in ground-controlled interception, dive-bombing, ground-strafting, and low-level air-ground support, bomber escort and attack. Training was carried out with cooperation from armored units stationed nearby and from bomber units also training. Training of ground personnel continued, as well as ground training for pilots. Misfits and unsatisfactory trainees were eliminated here and the Group began to function as an efficient unit.

C. Another move came on 18 August 1943. This time to the Oroville, California, AAB. Headquarters detachment was accompanied by the 363rd Squadron; the 362nd Squadron remained at Hayward, and the 364th Squadron moved to Marysville, California.

At the new stations training continued along the same trend as before, only in a more advanced phase. Warning Orders for overseas movement were received by the unit on 30 August 1943. Inspections began immediately, along with the final clearing of unsatisfactory personnel. Pilot strength was reduced to T/O authorization as well as ground personnel.

D. The next movement of the Group started on 3 October 1943. The move was into the 2nd Air Force for the last minute combined training with heavy bombardment units of that command. Group and 363 Squadron moved to Casper, Wyoming, 364 Squadron moved to Ainsworth, Nebraska, and 362 Squadron moved to Pocatello, Idaho. Final preparations for moving overseas were made while at the above stations.

E. On November 9th the units of 357 Group entrained from their respective stations bound for the staging area of Camp Shanks, part of the New York Port of Embarkation. While at Camp Shanks all of the final details were taken care of; i.e., arms were inspected, final equipment issued, records brought in order to the last minute, lectures and movies on military facts attended and physical training classes attended.

F. From Camp Shanks the unit boarded the train bound for the pier at approximately 2330 hours, crossed the ferry, and at 0300, 23 November 1943 went aboard HMS Queen Elizabeth. Sailing hour was at 1600 hours, 23 November 1943. At sea for five and one half days, docking at Guernsey, Scotland, in the Firth of Clyde, 29 November 1943. Immediately after docking 362 Squadron and Group Headquarters entrained for Raydon Wood, Suffolk, England, arriving after an 18 hour train trip at approximately 1130 hours 30 November 1943. The other two squadrons followed on successive days. The first assignment of the Group in the European Theater of Operations was to the IX Air Force. While in the IX Air Force the unit was assigned to the 70th Fighter Wing. Difficulties were experienced at first, mainly due to lack of equipment. OEL and TAT equipment was late in arriving, but during December it finally arrived. Training directives, Field Orders, and memorandums from all of the higher headquarters were received and complied with. An extensive program of orientation, training, and field work was begun. Pilots began flying operational missions as part of the 354th Group. For 357 Group the war had finally begun.

G. Verbal Orders from General Quesada of the IX Fighter Command moved the unit again. This move was to AAF Station F-373, Leiston, Suffolk, from the IX Air Force to become a part of the VIII Air Force, VIII Fighter

Command, and 66th Fighter Wing. The move was approximately 40 miles distant and made in convoy with Headquarters and 362 Squadron beginning the move and the other two squadrons following on successive days.

Since 31 January 1944, the Group has remained at the same place, AAF Station F-373, Leiston, Suffolk.

4. The first airplanes assigned to the newly activated unit was at Tonopah, Nevada; the P-39 Aircobra. This plane was used all during the training in America. Upon arrival in the ETO P-51 Mustangs were assigned and it is with them that the Group has been flying the successful operational missions. 357 Fighter Group was the first P-51 Group in the VIII Fighter Command. In the five months of operation of the Group has destroyed nearly 60 German aircraft per month and has accomplished outstanding work in bomber escort, ground attack, and other aerial support. A summation of these is listed elsewhere, including ground targets attacked and destroyed. In examining the records of other Groups, the 357th has accomplished more to destroy the Nazi war machine than any other Group in the ETO in a similar period of time.

The Group initiated several new tactics and techniques, as follows:

MARCH 6, 1944: Lt. Col. Hayes (then Maj. Hayes) took command of the Group in the air when Col. Graham was forced to abort because of engine trouble. At that time Major Hayes was commanding the 364th Fighter Squadron. He led the inexperienced group of 33 Mustangs to Berlin in the second major attack directed at this city (the first attack having failed because of weather). The Group provided target support to B-24s and B-17s attacking targets in and near that city, being one of the first fighter groups to reach that city. Finding his own force (3rd task force of 2nd division B-24s) free of enemy attack prior to arrival at the target, Col. Hayes led sections of his group into combat with the other task forces preceding, who were being viciously attacked by one of the largest forces of enemy fighters ever assembled against our forces. Fighter escort on these two forces was inadequate in numbers to protect the various combat wings against the coordinated attacks of 150 plus single-engine and twin-engine fighters. Col. Hayes dispatched flights and sections to protect each combat wing as it arrived over the target. Upwards of 40 enemy aircraft at the time were attacked by these separate flights and sections and driven away from the bombers (both S/E and T/E types). Both B-17s of the first two task forces and B-24s (which 357 Group was assigned to protect) were supported on withdrawal as the enemy attacks continued. Escort was continued in some cases all the way to the enemy coast.

In addition, Lt. Col. Hayes led his flight in to strafe a large airdrome, himself damaging a He 111K and destroying 15 to 20 armed personnel on the airdrome. This airdrome was a large and modern field east of Ulzen. This was perhaps the first time the P-51 B was used to attack ground targets.

The primary target attack was carried out under the most difficult conditions, under heavy anti-aircraft fire, and our planes were often outnumbered as much as 6 to 1. As a result, many bombers were saved and the coordinated attacks of the largest enemy fighter force ever assembled was effectively broken up. For the whole period over the target, Col. Hayes directed the attacks and chased enemy aircraft by the scores away from the bombers. With his very small number of Mustangs, every available second was used to prevent one of the most disastrous days in the history of modern aerial warfare against our bombers. Every type of fighter aircraft available to the enemy were attacking, with rockets playing an important part in the attack. The final score: 20 - 1 - 7, and no losses for the 357th.

MARCH 8, 1944: Lt. Col. Hayes was leading a flight of the 364th Squadron when he destroyed an Me 109 and marked the first time that the long-range escort P-51B hit the deck on withdrawing from a long range escort mission. Returning from Berlin and after having been relieved as escort, Lt. Col. Hayes destroyed an Me 109. He then hit the deck with his flight, 50 miles east of Hanover, pioneering in an action never before attempted in such heavily defended territory.

They followed the railroad at zero altitude all the way to Hanover, at times under heavy ground fire, and successfully destroyed or probably destroyed six locomotives and strafed two trains and a railroad station, tying up traffic on a double track to Berlin. Numerous other ground targets were attacked enroute. The other three planes in his flight destroyed 3 locomotives and a Fw 190 in the same action. Lt. Col Hayes did not let up on this attack until right over Hanover, when scores of flak guns of every calibre began shooting at them. In this action and in the action of March 6 when he strafed an airdrome, Lt. Col. Hayes pioneered in a field which has proven one of the most effective weapons against the Hun, when, without precedent, he attacked these heavily defended ground targets deep in the heart of Germany, and pointed the way to destruction of the Luftwaffe on the ground and the complete disruption of German communications and transportation in Germany. These fearless acts have pointed the way to the final downfall of Germany and provided inspiration and guidance to all the men of the Army Air Forces. Within a week, his methods were being tried by all P-51 Groups in the theater with great success.

The Group was one of the first to reach Berlin and have been on some of the deepest penetrations ever accomplished by a fighter group, the longest of these probably, to Posen, in Poland.

5. Since activation at Hamilton Field, California, in December of 1942, outstanding personnel has been plentiful. Lt. Colonel Stetson, Col. Graham, Col. Spicer, Lt. Colonel Hayes, Egenes, Dagne, and others all contributed to the efficiency and success of the organization in their various capacities of Commanding Officer, Deputy Commanders, and Operations Officer.

After becoming operational a total of 26 Aces have been developed. The squadron commanders have done exceptionally well in their own organizations. Morale among the pilots and ground personnel has remained high and efficiency has not been questioned. To Major Broadhead, Major Hiro, and Major Storch should go congratulations for the way their squadrons have performed. Each of these squadron Commanders has come up from their own squadrons, having served previously as Operations Officers. Other squadron commanders added their bits for the time they served. Lt. Colonel Egenes was the only other commander of 362 Squadron. The first Commander of 363 Squadron, Captain Stuart M. Lauler, left the unit because of being unable to fly at high altitudes. He is now a Squadron Commander of a low-level A-20 Group in the IX Air Force. Captain Clay R. Davis was killed in a training crash. Lt. Wesley S. Mink left the squadron while they were still in America. Capt. Giltner, who relieved him, was the first combat loss of the Group and is now a prisoner in Germany. Major Throop, a transfer from another unit, was the next to command 363 Squadron. He completed his tour and is now in America. Captain Varian K. White, the first Commanding Officer of 364 Squadron was killed in a crash in California in May, 1943. Lt. Colonel Hayes (then Capt.), took over them. He served until coming to Group Headquarters as Deputy Group Commander March 29, 1944. Major Storch was then designated as Commanding Officer, being relieved from his operations duties, to assume more responsibility.

6. The first three missions against the enemy by the Group on 11, 12, 13, February, 1944 were uneventful. On the next mission the ice was broken: two Nazi planes were destroyed and two damaged. On March 4 the Group flew to Berlin, or rather started to Berlin but weather forced them back. Not without claims of 2 destroyed and 1 probably destroyed and 1 damaged. Col. Spicer led. The next significant mission was another trip to Berlin two days later, on 6 March with Lt. Colonel Hayes leading. On this day the Luftwaffe chose to fight and 357 Group showed their calibre by destroying 20, 1 probable, and 7 damaged without the loss of a single plane. This feat by a Group that had not been operational a month caused older units to take notice and brought congratulations from several higher headquarters.

Later missions brought success in a lesser degree and on several occasions the Group was able to find the Hun and destroy more than 15 of the Luftwaffe. On a mission to Sorau with Major Dregne leading, 25 enemy planes were destroyed and 10 damaged on April 11th. Major Dregne led another mission, to Erding, on April 24th, when 22 were destroyed, 2 probably destroyed, and 7 damaged. During the next month Major Dregne led 3 successful missions. One on 21st of May, when claims were 18-0-1; on 27th of May when the claims were 19-0-0; and on 30th of May when claims were 20-0-3. The month of May also saw the longest of all fighter missions when 357 Group, with Colonel Graham leading, flew to Posen, Poland, and returned, on an escort of heavy bombers May 29th.

During June the Luftwaffe did not choose to fight and even though the Group flew 8 separate missions on D-day, gradually tapering down to 1 per day, resistance from the air was encountered only the latter part of the month. Ground targets were bombed and strafed at will. On 16th of June Lt. Colonel Hayes, led a mission to France where railways were attacked by using wing tanks as bombs and setting fire to the gasoline with tracers. A lot of Nazi equipment went up that day. Lt. Colonel Hayes was again leading an escort mission on 29th of June, when the enemy air force finally chose to fight. 21 Nazi aircraft were destroyed and 4 damaged by this Group. The mission was exceptional enough that General Kepner congratulated this unit. The text of his message read:

"I wish to commend all Groups and particularly 357 and 361 Groups for the most outstanding escort job ever performed on 29 June 1944. No bombers were lost due to enemy aircraft. In providing protection you destroyed 48 Huns and damaged others. You made the enemy pay dearly for his attempt to intercept our bombers. We strive for perfection and on yesterday's mission you made the closest approach to it under difficult conditions ever recorded. I am proud to be "the Old Man" of you who carry the fight to the Hun wherever you find him."

And from General Woodbury, whose message read:

"Hearty congratulations on your very successful mission. The aggressiveness and fighting spirit you have always displayed are a constant source of satisfaction to the Wing and myself. Keep up the good work".

7. During July and August of 1944, things had settled down to a routine. Combat consisted mostly of escort missions, and everyone was getting settled and accustomed to living in England. During the month of August, Lt. Colonel Robert T. Romine of the 357th Fighter Group was appointed Station Executive Officer after Lt. Colonel Charles H. Mason returned to the ZI on a new assignment.

8. The month of September saw the 357th fly 25 missions, even though the weather was bad most of the time. On these missions a total of 60 enemy aircraft were destroyed, but the good combat record was marred to some extent by an unusually large number of accidents on the home field. However the unit had by this time made some records which were never broken by any other group. They had, after 8 months of combat brought their total of enemy planes destroyed to the 400 mark. The highest monthly average of any group in the AAF over a similar period of time. The tactical work in support of ground forces in France, the number of ground targets destroyed by strafing, and dive-bombing was equally impressive.

9. The months of October and November were rather quiet for the group, but things picked up during December and 64 enemy aircraft were destroyed with 19 missions having been flown.

10. January of 1945 completed a year of combat for the 357th Fighter Group. Missions by this time were being considered as "milk runs", and everyone was worried because they feared a total of 600 Luftwaffe planes would not be destroyed. The Jerries were just not coming up anymore, and it began to look like the AAF had really taken over air superiority for good. Combat was still dull during February, but in March it picked up as the Luftwaffe again took to the air, only to be knocked down. The Group took credit for 59 of the enemy aircraft destroyed that month. Also during March the VIII Air Force clamped a restriction on strafing. There would be no more of it, except by specific orders from higher headquarters. This was put into effect because the Luftwaffe had no gasoline to fly their planes even if they had wanted to. The month of April was also a slackening period. The Hun was sighted several times but never attempted to make any passes on the bombers that were being escorted by the 357th.

11. May of 1945 saw the end of the war in Europe. Combat operations ceased for the Group on April 25th, 1945 when they flew their last mission. They had made history in the skies over Europe, and had set records that were never broken by any other Group in the world.

COMBAT ACHIEVEMENTS

Our remarkable combat record reached its crowning peak on January 14th, 1945, the mission, led by Colonel Dagne when, in one of the most vicious air battles of the war, the group destroyed 56 1/2 German planes in the air for a loss of three of our own. One enemy plane on the ground and two locomotives were thrown in for good measure. This is a record for the 8th Air Force and perhaps for the whole United States Army Air Force. Fifty-six of our planes were in this battle and they fought against better than three-to-one odds.

The following figures represent 14 months of combat:

TOTAL DESTROYED (AIR)		TOTAL DESTROYED (GROUND)
599 1/2		112
TOTAL DESTROYED	PROBABLES	DAMAGED
711 1/2	25	178

Approximately 190 locomotives were destroyed.

There were 48 Aces in the 357th Fighter Group.

Major Leonard K Carson, of the 362nd Fighter Squadron was the leading Ace in the Group, with 22 enemy planes destroyed.

When the war ended the Group began a period of training in new tactics, especially those employed by the Japanese.

Then news came that the 357th was to become part of the occupational Air Force in Europe, and the months of June and July of 1945 were spent in moving to their new base in Germany, which was located just South of Munich near the small town of Neubiberg.

At first a great deal of flying was accomplished, but as more and more men were redeployed to the E of I, it became harder to keep the planes in the air. At present the Group is doing well if four Mustangs are able to fly. It is hoped, however, that long promised replacements will arrive to help bring the Group up to somewhere near it's fighting strength.

Monday, October 4, 1943.

According to a teletype received in Headquarters from the Commanding Officer of the Ainsworth, Nebraska, Air Base, 2nd Lt. Richard A. Peterson ran out of gas and made a forced landing just south of Presidio, Mexico. The P-39 was a complete wreck from hitting a couple of trains standing on a siding after it had slowed a lot, but Lt. Peterson was uninjured. The plane was being ferried to 364th's new station in Ainsworth.

Headquarters and the 363rd straightened up last minute details at the Oroville Sub-base all morning and got on the train at 1300 for the trip to Casper. Headquarters had a bit to do in straightening out 363rd baggage that was put in the wrong car, otherwise the loading was without incident.

On the way at last and enjoying the beautiful scenery of the Feather River Canyon, through which we travelled all afternoon. High, steep, and pine-covered mountains on both sides and the swift Feather River first on one side and then on the other, big boulders that caused one to realize the size of man is small.

Tuesday, October 5, 1943.

Still travelling east. The scenery has changed from rough mountains to the treelessness of the Nevada countryside of which we saw enough while in Tonopah. Arrived at Salt Lake City about 2100 and from there turned south to go through the Wasatch Mountain Range. The strain of the trip is beginning to tell. The Train Commander's rules are that EM are to get off the train and one of them passed a joking remark about "leg-irons that broke the monotony of "blackjack" and "shooting the bull". Especially when the TC reprimanded him.

Wednesday, October 6, 1943.

Last night we swung back to the east and this morning went through Grand Junction, Colorado. Shortly after lunch we passed a big Infantry training post by Salida. From the train one could get a view that reached for miles. More mountains, this time the "Rockies". Gorgeous is the name for the Royal Gorge through which we passed about 2100. A big moon lighted the steep walls, the swift stream and the mile high suspension bridge over the Gorge. Tourists travel miles and miles to see the scenery that we have passed through.

Thursday, October 7, 1943.

Over on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains this morning going north. Again the scenery has changed from mountains to flat prairie country, but this time it has grass on it. To most of us on the train we are getting tired of scenery in any form.

Arrived at our new station, Casper Army Air Base about 2100. The Officers went to their quarters and the EM shown theirs. Their beds were not set up so until 2300 or so the place was a bee-hive of activity, setting up beds, drawing bedding, unloading baggage and the like.

Friday, October 8, 1943.

A rather large place. A lot different from the small sub-bases from which we have been operating lately. Breakfast wasn't very good. When the cooks looked over their larder they found it consisted of a case of sauerkraut, a barrel of sugar, and a bottle of catsup. They did rustle around and we ended up with pancakes, period.

Saturday, October 9, 1943.

CWO Hoy L. Perdue, Group S-4 Officer, was awarded the American Theatre Campaign Medal and Asiatic-Pacific Theatre Campaign Medal by paragraph #4, Special Orders, #231, 357th Fighter Group.

This day was spent in getting further straightened around for business and in looking over the new station. Quite a military place, no fraternizing between Officers and Men, "must salute" orders, review every Saturday, Retreat ceremonies every day, complete uniform at all times, and the like. Different from the small fields at which we have been stationed.

Sunday, October 10, 1943.

Major Donald W. Graham, Group Executive, was relieved of the added duty of Command of the 363rd Squadron by paragraph 4, Special Orders #232, 357th Fighter Group. The reason being that Capt. Joe H. Giltner, Jr., reported to Group and was assigned as Commanding Officer, 363rd F Sq, by paragraph 5 of the same Orders.

Contrary to everyone's expectations of Casper the weather is not cold. Some colder than the 95 degree temperature of Oroville but comfortable except for the 25 MPH wind that seems to blow constantly.

Monday, October 11, 1943.

Paragraph #7 of the 357th's Special Orders #24 reduced Sgts. Eschol S. Myers, Lester V. Blosser, and Francis P. Clarke, 363rd Sq, to Privates for misconduct. Their misconduct being caught on the streets after curfew. Paragraph #8 of the same orders promoted them to Corporals.

Tuesday, October 12, 1943.

Equipment, personnel, and records are being brought to perfection in anticipation and preparation for our eventual overseas movement and contact with the enemy.

Wednesday, October 13, 1943.

The 357th Fighter Group made the news. Following is a newspaper story and picture that accompanied it as it appeared in the "Slip Stream", the Base publication of the Casper Army Air Base:

FIGHTER GROUP SENT HERE

Training of Combat Crews is Broadened
Experienced Pilot Heads New Group

A fighter group of single-engined planes, headed by Lt. Col. Edwin S. Chickering, were assigned to the air base last week, broadening the training program for heavy bombardment combat crews and fighter pilots.

The fighter planes will work with the heavy bombardment group in training designed to simulate general battle conditions, in addition to regular training in formation flying and aerial gunnery.

The fighter planes will be flown on interceptor and attack missions and will practice escorting the heavy bombers. The interceptor work will include only training in intercepting bombers, but will include combating other fighter planes. Crews of the heavy bombers as well as of the fighter planes will benefit from the combined training.

Holding key position in the group besides Colonel Chickering, the group commanding officer, are Major Donald W. Graham, group executive officer; Major Robert T. Romine, adjutant; Capt. Alfred W. Craven, Jr., Intelligence officer; Captain Joseph H. Giltner, squadron commanding officer; 1st Lt. Dave C. Willett, squadron adjutant; and Capt. Dan L. Evander, squadron administrative executive officer.

Colonel Chickering, who was promoted to his present rank July 23, 1942, at the age of 29, is a native of Oil City, Pa. He was first commissioned in Ordnance in 1935 and a year later entered flying school, graduating with a pair of wings from Kelly Field in June 1937.

The young officer was first sent to Barkadale Field. He served as an instructor in primary and basic training at Randolph Field for eight months and spent the next 30 months as a pursuit instructor at Kelly Field.

After his assignment there he was made a training group commander and director of flying at the advanced single-engine school at Brooks Field for eight months. In August, 1942, he became a director of training at an advanced glider school at Lubbock, Texas.

During March and April, 1943, he gained his only experience in foreign country when he ferried P-38s to Africa. In June of this year he became an A-3 of the San Francisco Fighter Wing and a month later became commanding officer of his present fighter Group.

Colonel Chickering, a senior pilot with more than 3,000 flying hours to his credit, is a graduate of Lehigh University where he obtained a B. S. degree in Industrial Engineering. He is married and his wife now resides in Casper.

Special Orders, #234, paragraph 1, 357th F Gp, awarded T/Sgt. George M. Tellefsen the Good Conduct Medal.

Paragraph 2 rated Sgt. Jerome A. Anderson, 363rd, as a marksman with a .30 caliber rifle with a score of 139.

Paragraph 4 relieved 1st Lt. William R. O'Brien from 363rd and sent him to Group and paragraph 5 assigned him as Assistant Operations Officer.

Paragraph 3 transferred 1st Lt. Paul K. DeVries to 363rd from Group to replace Lt. O'Brien.

Thursday, October 14, 1943.

S/Sgt. Ellsworth A. Ott, 362nd, was transferred to AC Unassigned and attached to Detachment 18th Replacement Wing while awaiting appointment as an Aviation Cadet, according to paragraph 3, Special Orders #235, 357th Fighter Group Headquarters.

A slight accident today, too. 2nd Lt. Glen A. Hubbard, 364th, damaged the prop reduction gear on a P-39 when trouble developed with the landing gear while he was taking off. Folded up with him.

Friday, October 15, 1943.

Flight Officer Charles E. McKee, 363rd, had engine trouble today while on an interception mission and was forced to drop out of the formation on the last pass at the bombers. He made a wheels-up landing without injury to himself but the damage to the ship is estimated as total. Tough luck as McKee is a good pilot.

357th Fighter Group Special Orders #236, paragraph 5, rated 2nd Lt. Robert W. Brown as A Sharpshooter with .45 caliber pistol. Scored 83% accuracy.

Saturday, October 16, 1943.

Flight Officer Charles E. Yeager, 363rd, did an admirable job of bringing a P-39 in on its belly today. The landing gear would not come clear down so the ambulance, fire truck, and all, was out but the pilot set it down with no personal injury and a minimum of damage to the plane. Another skillful pilot.

Cpl. Albert Foelgner, 362nd, was reduced in grade to Private for misconduct and inefficiency according to paragraph 3, 357th F Gp Special Orders #237.

Sunday, October 17, 1943.

1st Lt. George D. Currie, Assistant Group Operations Officer, is awarded the Asiatic-Pacific campaign medal and the American Defense Medal and is authorized to wear the Bronze Star on the latter for service outside the continental United States prior to December 7, 1941, by paragraphs 2 and 3 of Special Orders #238 to the 357th Fighter Group.

Had a tactical inspection by the 72nd Fighter Wing today. The inspectors were flying with a formation on a practice interception mission and sure 'nuf we have a bad break. Lt. Colonel Chickering was leading the flight and went in for a pass at the bombers. His wing-man, Lt. Currie, collided with him and chewed the tail off the ship almost to the engine. Colonel Chickering "hit the silk" and Lt. Currie was able to bring his plane in for a landing as it was still controllable.

Still taking leaves. All of the Special Orders of Group today were devoted to the granting of leaves to Officers.

Flight Officer Charles E. Yeager suffered his second accident within the last six days, today. This time wasn't his fault either. He was flying combat formation when the engine failed and the ship caught fire about 20 miles SW of the Base. Using good judgement he bailed out and was uninjured but the P-39 was lost. The planes first flight since a preventative maintenance inspection, too.

The longer the 357th stays in the 2nd Air Force the better it gets along. Being the first fighter group here caused a lot of delays and lack of cooperation but apparently most of the "bugs" have been worked out of the administration and results are getting better and better.

COLONEL STEINSON OWNS A FOCKE-WOLFE

On October 23, Major Graham received the following letter from Lt. Colonel LORING F. STEINSON, Jr., former Commander of the 357th Fighter Group:

Dear Don, Bob, and the Gang:

Laying in bed with a slight case of malaria and catching up on my correspondence. How's the old outfit getting along? Damn fine, I imagine. Been having a bit of fun myself. Caught me a FW the other day. Keep giving the boys plenty of gunnery. Saves lots of ammo not to mention wear and tear on the nerves. Our ships aren't the newest in the world, but at least they don't tumble and they get the job done. Have seen lots of the boys I knew years ago and we have quite a gang from Foster Field. Keep 'em flying abreast and I'll pass you some dope along later when it is possible. Don't let the boys gripe about promotions, they haven't seen anything yet. Enjoy your salads and women and whiskey while you can.

Best of luck,

Stets

2nd Lt. Joseph F. Pierce, 363rd, cracked up a UC-61A today while attempting to take off after a forced landing at Soda Springs, Idaho, because of lack of fuel. The landing was made with no difficulty but on the take-off a stone fence post, to quote one of the passengers, "knocked hell out of things". The pilot and M/Sgts Dean E. Jump, Lewis A. Adams, and George M. Tellefsen enjoyed their stay while waiting for transportation away from Soda Springs. According to their stories the townspeople treated them like conquering heroes.

Wednesday, October 27, 1943.

Friday, October 29, 1943.

The time draws closer and the 357th is a bee-hive of activity getting ready for overseas. The tension is tightening. All personnel are getting a bit short-tempered and other give-aways are apparent. Still good men even though we have never been in combat.

Nice weather but everyone hopes that we get out of Wyoming before the forty-below weather that we have been hearing about starts.

Saturday, October 30, 1943.

Just another day. Packing and other details are still going on.

Sunday, October 31, 1943.

Halloween! But where the 357th is there is not much of the holiday spirit or activity. Military routine goes on and "winding-up" continues.

2nd Lt. Eugene D. Rhoads and 2nd Lt. Robert L. Clark were assigned to 362nd and 364th Squadrons, respectively.

Wednesday, November 3, 1943.

Orders are emanating from the S-1 Section of Group Headquarters to have all personnel hike, have all supplies issued, all personnel go through the gas chamber, and quite a few orders to attend training films, etc. The time draws shorter.

Thursday, November 4, 1943.

Now the weather is against us. Has been nasty lately, cold, sleet, snow and the inevitable Wyoming wind. The weather along with the fact that we can't get all of the supplies and the kinds that we need have resulted in the changing of all of the orders at least once. This supply business is quite a problem at this base. We need a lot and the quartermaster doesn't have it and can't get it easily; the result is a lot of teletypes and telephone calls.

Friday, November 5, 1943.

The snow fell heavier today. More orders were changed. So many in fact that even the issuing headquarters were racing for the bulletin board to read the latest communique from S-1 as to what the program would be for the next hour.

Sgt. Richard E. Smith, 363rd, was reduced to grade of Private for misconduct by paragraph 1, 357th F Gp, Special Orders #254.

Paragraph 2 of the same orders received Cpl William J. Olsen from the San Francisco Fighter Wing and assigned him to the 364th Fighter Squadron.

On the same orders Cpl Carl W. Braun reported and was assigned to Hdqrs; Cpls Robert N. Smith, Charles W. Marn, Anthony J. Resca reported to Group and were assigned to the 362nd F Sq; Pvt. William H. Jackson went to 363rd F Sq; and Sgt. Winthrop C. King, Cpl Robert J. Grall, Pfc Kenneth E. Thoen, and Alex Fieglerman went to the 364th F Sq. All of these men reported from the 328th F Gp at Hamilton Field, California.

Paragraph 7 of Special Orders #254 changed Pvt. William H. Jackson from the 363rd assignment and sent him to 364th instead.

Sgt. Sam R. Loyacono, Jr., Hq 357th F Gp was awarded the Good Conduct Medal by Special Orders #254, paragraph 9, 357th Fighter Group.

Saturday, November 6, 1943.

More Snow! It is now about 4 inches deep and still falling. A four hour hike is scheduled for all Headquarters personnel at 1300 today. The hike is all off, according to the latest communique and the gas chamber is substituted. An inspection took place this morning of all equipment and clothing. Maybe we can get out of here without another one. This supply problem is really something with the 363rd Squadron and Headquarters at Casper and the other two squadrons in Pocatello and Ainsworth. Enlisted men finally have most of their stuff by afternoon.

Sunday, November 7, 1943.

Snowing again. Lightly but still snowing. Most of this unit is ready to leave as snow is something foreign to most of the places we have been and we don't like it. All EM and Officers, including Lt. Colonel Chickering took a hike this morning with field packs and weapons. It was just a little bit on the disagreeable side-----a wind, snow, and low temperatures, but the whole unit made it in good shape.

The rest of the day was spent in packing the remainder of our belongings to conform with all the regulations and tables of allowances, etc that we must not violate, and still have everything packed so that we will have what we need. Pretty much of a job, too. Just about have everything whipped, though. The weather is cleared up and morale is climbing. Good.
